Fortunately, the big scores weren't limited to the few mares who brought more than $6 million. A British venture called Breeding Capital PLC, run by financier William Sporborg with expert aid from Simon Marsh, Charlie Gordon-Watson and Michael Youngs, bought seven fillies or mares last year. Three of them (Erytheis, Madura and Leto) came up last night, all three with significant updates. The three had been bought for a total of 605,000gns last year at this sale; all three got in foal, on stud fees totalling around another 225,000gns. They sold for a combined 2,070,000gns yesterday. The boys are doing another Breeding Capital project in January and, after this performance, it's a fairly safe prediction that the project will be selling out in a hurry. Nothing But Net, and from the three-point line, too. Well done.
